

Customs Information

Documentation needed for yourself and your crew:

As of 2009 every person onboard (adults and children) will need a passport to travel by air between the USA and Canada. There are currently (June 1, 2009) a few other acceptable forms of documentation for travel by land or sea. Click here for information on current list of Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative accepted documentation.

RESTRICTIONS FOR TRAVEL TO CANADA

1. The Canadian government has restrictions on Canadian citizens chartering boats in the U.S. to cruise into Canadian waters.<sup>1</sup> If you are a Canadian citizen you will either need to restrict your cruising to U.S. waters or post a bond with the Canadian Government allowing you to cruise to Canada, refundable upon returning the boat to US waters. If another adult member of your crew is a non-Canadian citizen you may transfer the charter into their name, avoiding Ottawa's travel restriction.
2. Anyone with a criminal record (including a drunk driving conviction) may be excluded from Canada. A waiver of exclusion may be issued but several weeks are required and a processing fee must be paid. Visit <http://www.cic.gc.ca/english/information/applications/guides/5312E3.asp> for more information on this process.

Procedures:

Customs procedures on both sides are very courteous, civilized, and simple. These few steps will help keep it that way.

Cardinal Rule: Touch land at customs dock before any other stops. You must clear customs before anchoring, landing a dinghy/kayak, or touching a dock (other than the customs dock), a mooring buoy or another boat. Your crew may help you secure the boat at the customs dock, but will need to get back on board while you (the skipper) clear customs. (No dog walking on Customs dock.)

Documentation: Everyone aboard, including children, will need a passport to clear customs. In some cases other documentation may be acceptable. Visit http://www.getyouhome.gov/html/lang\_eng/index.html for other accepted forms of documentation that may apply to you.
